IRL3 (Investigator & Researcher) Training Course, Level Three

COURSE OVERVIEW

The Level Three course focuses on building on the skills and knowledge from IRL1 and IRL2, and builds on a student's hands-on experience in the industry. The overall objective of this course is to train students to work independently on assignments as well as developing basic leadership skills, thereby adding significant value to their involvement in the commercial side of their industry.

Consequently, we recommend that the Level Three training will benefit students who have at least 18 months to 2 years practical experience, and will cover in-depth understanding, application and appreciation of problem solving within the various investigator and research fields, as well as basic principles of operational planning and investigation management. Successful completion of the Level Three course will equip the student to take on the responsibility of investigation management, assuming some client facing responsibilities, and to understand the value of comprehensive and analytical briefings as well as investigation result reporting.

The course is taught over 3 days by experienced lecturers with a diverse background in the fields of investigation, research and leadership. The training will consist of classroom sessions supplemented by hands on role-playing and the application of skills learnt in a variety of scenarios. The course will conclude with a written case management scenario exercise, assessed by our panel of instructors, to test the student's understanding and practical application of the course material.
